NANSEN SEEKS FUND TO BUILD ARMENIAN HOME

Consents to Await League Move After Threatening to Act Independently

BRIAND PLEDGES AID FROM FRANCE

Proposal Made for Help to Nations Which Are Victims of Aggressive War

By Special Cable By Special Cable
GENEVA, Sept. 23—Dr. Fridtjof
Nansen startled the League Council by announcing that as he had failed to obtain further assistance from the League of Nations in support of his scheme for converting the Erivan republic into a national home for Armenians, he was determined to take the matter out of the hands of the Council and try other methods of raising the money.

Dr. Nansen had reluctantly to conclude that the allied governments, elude that the allied governments, which had made such lavish promises to Armeniana during the war in order to obtain their assistance against the Turks, failed in their duty, as he con-ceived it. He had, therefore, resolved to appeal to the conscience of the world in support of his scheme.

Appeal to Reconsider

Thereupon both Aristide Briand M. Titulesco appealed to him reconsider his decision, and M. Briand pledged France to give fur-ther assistance, although, as he pointed out, the French had already done a great deal to help the Armen-ians, especially in Syria. M. Titu-lesco suggested a further appeal on the part of the Council to all mem-

the part of the Council to all members of the League to assist Dr.
Nansen to carry out his scheme.

Dr. Nansen, while warning the Council that it was taking a great responsibility in issuing such an insulation consented to await the results of the council of the council to await the results of the council of the council to await the results of the council of the council to await the results of the council to await the results of the council to await the results of the council to a responsibility in issuing such an inwitation, consented to await the results of the appeal. He appeared in a very cheerful mood when the writer subsequently interviewed him on his plans, for in his view the members of the Council could hardly

Nationalist Leaders to Con fer on Matters of Lasting Importance

Special from Monitor Bureau WASHINGTON, Sept. 22-Manuel Quezon, president and leader of the Philippine Senate, and Senator Sergio Osmena, floor leader of the insular body, will come to Washington Sierra Leone Ordinance to before November on a special mission to President Coolidge to discuss the question of the Filipinos' status. This announcement is made by Pedro Guevara, resident commissioner of the Philippine Islands, who has informed President Coolidge of the visit. The appointment of a Governor-General to succeed Gen. Leon. ard Wood may be postponed until the mission has had an opportunity to reach this country. Affairs of lasting importance to the islands will be discussed by the two leading representatives of the people, Mr. Guevara believes, and it is expected that the meeting will decide whether the campaign for independence will be carried further, or a new direction given to the Nationalist movement.

It has been argued for some time that the Philippine issue is approaching a showdown, and the desire for conference has recently been for-mally expressed. Signs also have been visible that the intransigent demands for independence formerly expressed by insular leaders have been yield-ing to a more conciliatory attitude. Mr. Guevara, in an address this summer at Williamstown, Mass., called on all men of good will to throw their strength and influence "to support a plan for a conference on the Philippine problem." It was thought this might have been inspired by the

"The Congress of the United States and the Philippine Legislature should be authorized to appoint committees to meet jointly for the discussion of to meet jointly for the discussion of ployment for the slaves who leave the facts and the merits underlying their masters, for they will be land the Philippine problem, with a view to recommending a satisfactory solution. # LAW TO AFFECT 220,000 SLAVES

Fill in Gap Left by Previous Instrument

Wireless from Monitor Bureau vi Postal Telegraph from Halifax

LONDON, Sept. 23—Some 220,000 slaves will be affected by the new ordinance to be introduced shortly in the Sierra Leone Legislative Council freeing all domestic slaves in the Protectorate from Jan. 1 next, it is stated here. The ordinance is the result of a recent majority judg-ment of the Sierra Leone Court of Appeal, which dismissed a case for assault against a slave owner who had recaptured some escaped slaves. Until this judgment was given it had been supposed that the status of slave had already ceased to exist in the Protectorate under an ordinance of April 14, 1926, and the new law is designed to fill the gap left by the previous instrument.

Though the slaves will all become free as from the date mentioned, it is not anticipated here that more than a few of those affected will claim freedom.

Dr. Bankole Bright, one of the African elected members of Slaves

African elected members of Sierra Leone Legislative Council, who pro-nounced this opinion, in a recent in-terview in the Manchester Guardian, explained this by the fact that the majority of the slaves are either 'poor relations' or "servants who eat at the master's table, but have little in the way of money and rarely, if ever, break away from the farm."
Dr. Bright put the total figure of slaves in the Protectorate much lower than the official estimate. In his view there were 150,000 at the outside, of whom 50,000 had already "freed themselves by marrying their nasters' relatives.' When the ordinance comes into force the Government will be faced with the difficult task of finding emless, workless and moneyless.

ALL-WAVE TWO-TUBE RECEIVER IS DESCRIBED

British Engineer Gives Details of Successful High Frequency Set

By CAPT, ERNEST H. A high impedance, high magnification valve is used as a detector, with rather unusual values of gridlead and grid condenser. The actual valve used requires a six-volt accumulato for filament heating and has an impedance (A. C. resistance) of 55,000 ohms and a magnification of 35. It is the Cosmos SP55 blue spot. An American equivalent is, I believe, the

CONTROLLED SELLING IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

VICTORIA, B. C. (Special Correspondence)—So successful has Brit-ish Columbia's experiment in con-trolled agricultural marketing proved in the last few months that plans already are on foot here for the extension of the system. At the next session of the Provincial Legislature amendments to the present drastic marketing law will be introduced to make it cover many districts not now operating under it.

At present only the Okanagan Valley and contiguous areas are affected by the regulations under which a committee of experts fixes prices which must be observed by all fruit and vegetable growers. Next year the law will cover practically the entire vegetable industry of the Province, it is expected.

ITS NAME TO FLIERS

PLAINVILLE. Mass., Sept. 23

(Special)-In letters eight feet tall,

Charles A. Whiting has literally put this little village "on the map," the first town in Massachusetts to be so labeled for the benefit of airplane pilots and commuters between New York and Boston. Painters have just finished this "daylight beacon."

lts white block lettering flashes the words "Plainville, Mass." to passing fliers from the rooftop of the Walter Livingston Rice Memorial building, the recreational center presented by Mr. Whiting several years ago to the town of Plainville and the hundreds of employees in the Whiting & Davis Company plant.

Plainville is a hamlet between Wrentham and North Attleboro, so tiny that its name appears on few maps. Mr. Whiting says he hopes it will be an example to all the larger towns to make flying safer by painting identifying names on promi-nent buildings so that fliers may readily refer to a log of near-by landing places. In addition to putting this village on the "air map," Mr. Whiting has turned a large por-tion of the athletic field near the Rice Memorial building into a safe landing field for use by aviators in case a forced landing becomes neces-

The process has been gradual, it appears. In 1924, according to the report of the United States Employment Service, 53,923 workers were directed to the harvest fields to meet the peak of the demand there. In 1926, two years later, with a wheat crop of approximately the same size, only 33,227 men were sent. The reduction was about 35 per cent.

The decline in the requirements of the farmers has been due to the rapid increase in the use of improved agricultural machinery, and more particularly to the development of the unit harvester-thresher, commonly referred to as the "combiner" is the remarkable and production in the farm population from 31,614,269 to 83,931,693. Many Exceptional New Luxuries and Performance Features -Yet a New Low Price

EXAMINE-DRIVE-COMPARE THIS GREAT NASH SEDAN-AND IT'S EASY TO SEE WHY THE COUNTRY HAS GONE NASH!

This new Nash Special Six Four Door Sedan calls your attention very forcibly to Nash

At its new low price you will find that other manufacturers are asking from $100 to $150 more for cars not as fine in finish, and not nearly as fine in performance.

Here is one of the smartest looking, smart-est acting cars of the new season—built as only Nash builds motor cars, performing as only a Nash performs.

The body is a full two inches lower in the fashionable vogue. Window and door ledges, the instrument board and its crown ledge, are all finished in walnut.

The steering wheel is solid walnut, inlaid and crested. There are shirred door pockets.

form-fitting cushions, up-holstered in rich mohair and button-tufted in the custom manner. Luxury wherever you look!

Vanity case. New type,

And luxury in every mile and minute you drive it. It is quick on the go, always out in front at a traffic start, effortless on hills. There is increased power in its big 7-bearing Valve-in-Head motor. Yet that motor is even more quiet, even smoother. Integral balance of Nash operating parts has accomplished an astounding improvement in already fine motor performance.

And it is the easiest steering, easiest managed car you ever handled. It turns a corner at a mere hint from its steering wheel.

Finally, here is an easier riding motor car. New secret-process alloy-steel springs, just introduced by Nash, achieve supreme travel comfort. Drive this car before you buy your new one. Buy this car and save $100 to $150 of your good money.

HIGH STATE TAX LIKELY TO STAY, MR. ADLOW SAYS

Favors Aid to Towns and Cities by Division of Automobile Fees

Appreciable reduction in the tax levied by the Commonwealth on local government under the present payas-you-go policy, which finances capital expenditures by direct levies on cities and towns, cannot be effected for some time to come, in the opinion-of Elijah Adlow, Boston lawyer and former member of the Massachusetts Legislaure, expressed in an address on local taxation problems said Mr. Adlow, "the state tax would have fallen very low in the last few years because of the vigilance and care of the Governor and his Commission on Finance and Administration, were it not for the fact that the pay-as-you-go policy was instituted on Beacon Hill.

The Bridgewater Normal School, and other projects, the utility of which can be spread over a great many years, have been paid out of a direct levy on property in the last two and three years. Had the old program of financing these projects by bonds been followed the state tax in my opinion would have been about $1,500,000 less each year. Of course, when we realize that this state tax is a direct levy on local government to that extent the munigovernment to that extent the muni-cipalities of the Commonwealth might have been relieved of the bur-den of financing these long-lived

Boston Pensions Costly

"Relief for cities and towns must be sought in other directions. One reason why local government is so expensive in Boston is due to pensions. In 1927 the City of Boston appropriated for pensions $462,545. This year the City of Boston is appropriating for pensions $42,225,103.25, and it is estimated that next year the appropriation will be $2,255,607.25. This alone accounts for more than $1 increase in the tax

News of Madame Wel playing at the Chinese Theater here last Tuesday and Wednesday evening interested Miss Siu, for she had known Madame Wel and her husband and children well in China.

Films Inaccurate

Films Inaccurate

It was a short and humorous step to the Occidental moving pictures based upon Chinese themes. Miss Siu had recently seen two which astonished her, to say the least. "I daressy," she said, "that we should perhaps not succeed very well in doing American plays, but really, some of the thinga I have seen on the screen, supposed accuracies' of the screen, supposed 'accuracies' of Chinese social life, have been—well, shall I say odd? I remember one shall I say odd? I remember one picture and its unusually large cast of 'Chinese' characters. Two were Chinese. The rest, Mexicans and Filipinos, and they lacked, what you call the Chinese slant? It surprises me when I see Chinese money called 'yen.' Yen exists only in Japan. I 'yen.' Yen exists only in Japan. I saw a very striking costume on one of your leading character actors—supposed to be a high government official. He wore a woman's dress. Another had on a costume part mandarin, part coolie. I could not help wondering if you Americans wouldn't be surprised to see a gentleman go forth attired in a cutaway and enort shoes."

tieman go forth stired in a cutaway and sport shoes."

Miss Slu became momentarily serious. "There is a very simple explanation. Directors naturally study the Chinese quariers of your large cities, but most Chinese there have either been born there or have grown up there. Their parents have often lived here for a half century and all they know of Chines they have learned from their grandparents. So that when these Chinese are consulted about social customs and matters of dress it is very easy for them to be histaken. Therefore one really must not blame American screen directors for not knowing that the careful signs of their Chinese streets careful signs of their Chinese streets are all upside down,"
"Coming Closer to World"

Miss Siu turned back once again to the opportunity for specially trained women today in China. "China is changing overnight, socially, politically, educationally, It is no longer impossible for women to engage in educational and government of the control of the state department. Burr F. Jones talked to the grade teachers on the elementary teacher's perspective. Music was given by pupils of the Orange schools.

at least a small tax, instead of naving a few pay and many not pay as is the case here. The slightest increase in costs would he felt by the people and would be appreciated.

In order to relieve Massachusetts industries from the tax burden that is making it impossible for them to compete favorably with outside interests, Mr. Long proposed that the coming legislature pass bills enabling lower valuations, and thus lower taxes, upon the industries that were the most distressed.

An alternative would be to give the State Commissioner the power to fix an elastic valuation for a certain class of goods throughout the State and that the local assessors work with this as a basis. Such legisla-tion would go out of effect as soon as the Constitutional Amendmen giving relief was in effect. Because of legislative rules, however, this could not be passed and made effective inside of five years, and relief was urgently needed before that time, he declared.

Several of the tax assessors from different parts of the State followed Mr. Long in speaking before the commission. The majority of them cited local problems and local instances, and were in the main in favor of the proposed amendment.

SCRAPPING OF NAVY YARDS IS PROPOSED

Rear Admiral Sims Would Develop Naval Base

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 23 (A)-If the Boston and New York navy yards were scrapped enough money would be realized to fully equip Nar-ragansett Bay as the greatest naval base in the country, Rear Admiral William S. Sims, U. S. N., retired, told the regular weekly meeting of the Lions Club here yesterday.

"Narragansett Bay is the best base we have on this coast," Admiral Sims declared. "It meets all the re quirements. Our people are willing to let us have an adequate navy. If they understand, they want it to be efficient. A fleet without bases is not an efficient fleet. We have no real base on this side or the other side of the country."

Describing an ideal base, Admiral Sims said it must combine accessibility with protection in a spot where a whole fleet can be accommodated at one time, with facilities for refueling, resupplying and reconditioning. Such a base can never be developed, he added, unless the people of Newport and those "honestly interested in national defense keen the adventure of the one of the section's lake seasons of employment, or to manufacture for stock. DETROIT, Mich. (Special Correspondence)—Due to a relatively cool summer that reduced the rate of evaporation of a heavier than usual rainfall, levels of the Great Lakes have been rising, according to Col. George B. Pillsbury, in charge of the United States Lake Survey in the Detroit district.

In view of the fact that practically all of the Great Lakes have been approximately a foot higher than in the past few years during the shipping season, thus making possible larger cargoes, movement of tonnage has been expedited. The total of tonnage carried has shown little or no increase over last year, however.

GARDEN CITY, N. Y., Sept. 23 oyal Ottawa Club, Ottawa, Can., terminated the career of Mile. Simone Thion de la Chaume, the French and British champion, yesterday, in the National women's golf championship, at the Cherry Valley Club, when the former Miss Alexa W. Stirling, three times the holder of the title, defeated the 18-year-old French girl for entry into the semifinal round, 3 and 2. She had a hard battle to do it, however, only a streak of weakness on the greens by the French girl in the first few holes giving her an advantage which she held to the end.

The other three leaders of the medal play qualifying rounds, Miss Ada Mackenzle of Mississauga Club, Toronto, Canada; Miss Maureen Orcutt of White Beeches Golf and Country Club, Haworth, N. J., and Mrs. Mirlam Burns Horn, now a member of the erminated the career of Mile. Simone irns Horn, now a member of the Milburn Golf and Country Club, Kansas City, Mo., who won the western championship last year, were the other survivors, and will play as follows today: Miss Orcutt meeting Miss Mackenzle, who holds the Canadian championship, while Mrs. Hörn will encounter Mrs. Fraser.

Matches Well Fought All the matches were close and well fought in the third round yesterday, and the match between Miss Orcutt and Miss Marie R. Jenney of Hudson and Miss Marie R. Jenney of Hudson River Country Club, Yonkers, N. Y. went to 20 holes, two over the regulation number, before it was decided in favor of the present metropolitan champion over her predecessor. Miss Mackenzic also had to come from behind to dispose of Miss Virginia Van Wie of the Beverly Country Club of Chicago, after trailing at 2 down at the turn, but a series of good putts on the fourteenth. fifteenth and seventeenth holes placed the Canadian champion ahead and though Miss Van Wie led the way to the green in the final hole, she was unable to do more than tie in 4s. and the match went to Miss Mackenzie, 1 up.

trouble on the next, but though Mrs. Fraser was in a far worse position, she managed to halve the hole while the French girl required three putts. Mile. de la Chaume, however, then began to recover her form, and started by sinking a brilliant putt for a 2 from a rough spot on the edge of the green, easily 20 feet away. But this advantage was neutralized on the ninth, when a perfectly executed putt from the edge of the green by Mrs. Fraser, 40 feet at least, went straight for the hole.

The Holes Divided

The holes Divided

The next three were divided, with Mrs. Fraser extricating herself from all kinds of difficulties while Mile. de la Chaume was steadily losing on the la Chaume was steadily losing on the la Chaume was steadily losing on the la Chaume, when Mrs. Fraser topped her drive heavily into some long grass 20 feet from the tee, and failed to overcome the handicap, with the French player for once holding her own, shot for shot, on the green.

Now, though Mile. de la Chaume was playing her finest golf. Mrs. Fraser, and then a final 10-foot putt gave the sixteenth to Mrs. Fraser, with Mile. de la Chaume two feet away on the same stroke, and the match ended. It was a fine example of skill in evading difficulties for Mrs. Fraser, against fine stroking but the lack of experience of her 18-year-old oppoment. The summary:

NEW YORK, Sept. 22—The New York Yankees tied the American League record for total victories in a season by winning their one hundred and fifth game here, yesterday, against Detroit, 8 to 7. Incidentally, Ruth drew one closer to his home run record of 59 in a season by itting his fifty-sixth in the ninth inning with Koenig on base, winning the game. Gehrig also figured in the record discussions by knocking in two runs to total 172 that he has accounted for this season besides those he has scored himself. Ruth, his team-mate, held the record, previously, at 170, made in 1921. Detroit had apparently clinched the game by a three-run rally in the ninth which gave it a 7 to 6 margin. Combs hit three triples. The score:

was in the nature of a surprise. The performances of Mrs. Pressler this season had made her a strong favorite to take the national title, but the steadiness of Mrs. Horn following a series of weak approaches by Mrs. Pressler in the earlier holes proved decisive. Again and again Mrs. Pressler would gain, only to lose the next to the former titleholder. The score was 2 and 1.

Unsteady on Greens

It was the lack of steadiness on the greens of Mile. de la Chaume that gave Mrs. Fraser her lead at the start of the match. The French girl landed in a trap on the first, and though she redeemed herself in the next shot, she missed the first putt on a short green shot and the hole went to Mrs. Fraser, 4—5. The second also went to Mrs. Fraser, when Mile. de la Chaume overshot the green on an easy approach, and needed two putts once more from a five-foot line, while Mrs. Fraser added a third to her advantage, on the fifth. When Mile. de la Chaume missed a 19-foot putt for a 4, while Mrs. Fraser sank a seven-foot try. Both were in trouble on the next, but though Mrs. Frist Game

College Football Opens Season Soon

Many Varsity Elevens Will Be Seen in Action This

Week-Lnd

While many of the big college elevens will not begin their gridron games until next week, intercollegiate football for the season of 1927 will make its bow tomorrow afternoon with games being played in all parts of the United States. Harvard, Yale and Frinceton universities in the East; the Western and Missouri Valley Conference elevens in the central West and a few of the Southern Conference teams will be among those not playing this week-end.

Among the big elevens which will make their initial bows in the East will be New York University, Columbia University, University and the United States Military Academy. All of these elevens will be meeting teams which are not expected to give them hard battles.

New York University, one of the best of the eastern teams of 1926, is looking forward to a still more successful season this fall. Coach J. F. Meehan has a fine lot of veterans back this fall and followers of the Violet expect their eleven to better the 1925 showing when its only defeat was at the hands of the University of Nebraska, 15 to 7.

Brown Has Veterans

Brown Has Veterans

Brown University, which came through the season of 1926 with victories over Harvard, Yale and Dartmouth and nothing but a 10-to-10 tie with Colgate University to mar its record, opens again with Rhode Island State College and it expects to improve on its 14-to-0 victory of last year. Brown is just now without the services of its captain and quarterback, R. E. Randall '28; but it has enough veterans from 1926 to insure another very powerful eleven.

University of Pennsylvania is pointing toward one of its hardest seasons with Harvard on its list for the first time in a number of years, while the United States Naval Academy will also face the Red and Blue this fall. Coach L. A. Young has had his candidates hard at work for two or three weeks; but prospects do not look as good as they did last spring as Pennsylvania has lost one or two of the promising candidates expected to be out this fall. Franklin and Marshall will again open the season for Penn which will strive to equal the score of Brown Has Veterans promising candidates expected to be out this fall. Franklin and Marshall will again open the season for Penn which will strive to equal the score of 41-to-0 made last year.

Dartmouth College is looking forward to 1927 with less optimism than was the case a year ago and this may prove a benefit to the Green. Coach J. B. Hawley appeared to be on the way to an eastern championship in 1926; but the team received a surprising setback at the hands of Yale University and it never again showed championship possibilities. losing to Harvard and Brown on the next two Saturdays and dropping its final game of the season to Cornell, 24 to 23. This fall the material does not appear to be as good as that of a year ago, so Coach Hawley will do surprisingly well if he can build up an eleven that will win a majority of its games this fall. Norwich is the Green's first opponent and another score of 59-to-0, which was last year's is not to be expected.

Army-in-India Polo Team Wins by a Narrow Margin, 8 to 7

Gains Final Round in United States Open Tournament by Defeating the Hurricanes at Meadowbrook-Roark Scores Four Goals for His Team

WESTBURY, N. Y., Sept. 23 (Spe- No. 3-Maj. E. G. Atkin cial)—The Army-in-India team just managed to attain to the final round of the United States open pony pole championship on International Field, Meadowbrook yesterday, when an extra period was required for victory

Even with most of the Army-in-India ponies which made such a fine showing in the recent international matches on the same field, the British had a hard time to win. Their inability to score final shots was still present, and only in the last minute of the regular chukkers were they able to overcome a lead that the Hurricanes had gained. Even then, three of the British rode past the ball, which was right in front of the Hurricane goal, and only the fourth, Lieut. Humphrey P. Guinness, the added substitute, hit it through for the tieing goal. Captain George Scores with a high drive that went between the posts for the needed goal.

The other semifinal, in which the United States Army team will meet the Sands Point four, with Thomas Hiltchcock Jr. in the lineup, will be played tomorrow, with the finals next week.

The forward combination, Captain George and Captain Dening, who so greatly improved the play of the British team in the second game of the international matches last week, were again the leading factors in the success of the Army-in-India team. Between them, they scored six of the eight goals for the winners, and only many attempts that went outside the polay of the British many attempts that went outside the polay of the British many attempts that went outside the polay of the British many attempts that went outside the polay of the British many attempts that went outside the polay of the British team. # House in Which Irving Wrote to Be Americanization Center

Author's Town House on Seventeenth Street, New York City, Now Surrounded by Tall Buildings, Is Saved for Literary Shrine

Special from Monitor Bureau NEW YORK-An old house at the southwest corner of Irving Place and East Seventeenth Street, sitting extravagantly amid towering office extravagantly amid towering office buildings, apartment houses and lofts, is destined to go down in history carrying the atmosphere of early Nineteenth Century architecture. It was occupied by Washington Irving as his home from 1858 to 1856. It has been acquired by the National Patriotic Builders of America which will restore and preserve it as a literary shrine and as the headquarters for Americanization work.

It was here that Irving wrote much of his "Astoria" and read proof on his "Life of Washington." From the front windows and the narrow grilled porch there was an unobstructed view of the East River, with an occasional house or barn dotting an occasional house or barn dotting the fields between, and in the eve-ning, so the records show. Irving would stroll across the fields and through the narrow, crooked little streets to the water. Today there is scarcely a blade of grass in the ining space, for in that con-section of Manhattan Island gested section of Manhattan Island builders have taken advantage of every inch of ground.

Authenticity of House Established Question as to the authenticity of the house as being the town resi-dence of Washington Irving was raised in a letter to the New York Times by Albert Ulmann, reported to be an authority on old New York. Mr. Ulmann presented the real estate record which, he said, covered transrecord which, he said, covered transfers of the property in question from 1844 to 1906 at which date it was acquired by Algernon S. Bell, who sold it to the Patriotic Builders. This record, Mr. Ulmann said, contains no reference to the ownership of the property by an Irving, although the house adjoining on Seventeenth Street, known as lot No. 66, was the residence of members of the Irving family.

Before the Patriotic Builders purchased the property it was definitely established that Irving had lived there. The house was the property of John Irving, nephew of the writer, and was regarded as Washington Irving's "town house." Memories of the old house are preserved by Mat. the old house are preserved by Maj. George H. Putnam, head of the Putnam publishing concern, who recalls his boyhood days as office boy for his father, who published many of Irving's works.

"I remember going to the old house with proofs and taking manu-scripts back," he said. "Washington Irving sat at his desk in the front room on the first floor. The old house is the same now as it was then ex-cept for the paint and perhaps a few

Was Fashionable Neighborhood The purchasers also have other proof that the author lived and worked there. The house at "Sunny-side," at Irving-on-the-Hudson, had already been built, and Irving passed much of his time there in fine weather, but his business and professional affairs were such that between 1853 and 1856 he felt the need of a house in the city, and the offer of his nephew provided one that was conveniently located and well suited to his needs. Major Putham said that while the "Life of Washington" was finished at "Sunnyside," much of the proof-reading was done in the town house and that practically the whole of "Astoria" was written and proof-read in the same place.

The neighborhood was fashionable then and was inhabited by many who then and was inhabited held literary and artistic aspirations. Near by is Gramercy Park, then also headquarters for many persons who were prominent socially and artistically, as well as figures of national prominence like John Bigelow and Cyrus W. Field. The distinguished preacher, Dr. Henry W. Bellows, lived in the same neighborhood. The old Tilden house, which was the home of the National Arts Club, one of the centers of art in America in its day, was within strolling distance, while was within strolling distance, while near by in the former home of Val-entine G. Hall, which became the Players Club, memories of Edwin Booth were treasured.

Walls Will Be Cleaned But most of these places have gone down as commerce and industry marched on, and within a few more years the old Irving house, with its drab walls, may have gone, too, had not the Patriotic Builders taken a hand in its destiny. Mrs. William Cumming Story, president of the organization, has announced that sandblasters will be employed to scrub away the dull, gray paint to expose the natural-colored pink bricks as they were when the house was erected, and also that the woodwork and iron grillwork will be restored to ita pristine condition. The interior, too, will be changed to conform to the original plans. Very little is to be done to make this change except the liberal use of water, soap and paint. The interior lines are still the same as they were a century ago. marched on, and within a few more tion. Also she has a number of fine old manogany pieces, some of which have been collected by relatives and friends of the Irving family, and these, too, will go into the house.

Perhaps as important as the acquisition of the old house is the announcement by Mrs. Story that the building will be the headquarters for a campaign for a more complete Americanization program than has ever been undertaken. Recent events, Mrs. Story finds, indicate the need of a better and more thorough understanding of what the United States is trying to do for its citizens and why natives of other lands, coming here to live and to work, should be properly assimilated into American living and American ideals.

Will Help Make Citizens Will Help Make Citizens

The Irving house is located in a section not far from the centers where various other nationals hav grouped themselves. It is in these grouped themselves. It is in these groups, Mrs. Story finds, that much of the misunderstanding of America and of American privilege originates. She considered it a happy combination of circumstances that the National Patriotic Builders were able to acquire the Irving house and hold it against the march of modern building as a literary shrine, but she it against the march of modern building as a literary shrine, but she considers of greater importance its place as a station for the dissemination of counsel and information for the traveler from other shores.

Wages in Prison Road Camps Give Paroled Men New Start

System Regarded as Highly Successful in California After Test of Four Years

SAN FRANCISCO (Staff Correspondence)—A system of wage payloment to state prisoners who work on California highways has been the means of rehabilitating many and at the same time has saved taxpayers considerable sums by making prisoners self-supporting, according to Ben H. Milliken, superintendent of prison road camps.

Reviewing four years of experinge in California, Mr. Milliken, whose records are good are admitted to the camps as a special privilege, and a means of testing their sincerity in asking for parole.

ence in California, Mr. Milliken pointed out that some 2000 men have spent an average of 10½ months in the camps and have earned an average of $85 each with which to begin civil life when paroled or released.

Men Are Self-Supporting
The men receive $2.10 a day for their work, and when all costs are deducted from this amount, a fraction more than 28 cents daily remains for savings. Since $2.10 was exactly the average daily cost to the

Self-Education Held to Purpose of Colleges

LEWISTON, Me., Sept. 23 (AP)— The colloquial question, "What is it all about?" was adopted by Dr. Clifton D. Gray in his matriculation address at the first chapel exercises of Bates College yesterday to express the popular state of mind regarding place and purpose of the American college.

"What is it all about?—these four years upon which so many of you enter this week with such high anticipation?" asked Dr . Gray. The answer can be put into a single word—self-education. The issue is clearly drawn. On the one hand is the quantitative theory. On the other hand is the qualitative theory which takes the position that education is a thoroughgoing process that actually does something to the pupil in exchange for sincere effort. It is not some-thing that can be handed to you by your teachers.

"The conduct of hundreds of released prison camp men has been closely observed, and the conclusion has been reached that it is not only desirable but necessary that they have some money with which to make a start. Too much money, however, is a detriment, as it gives the former prisoner a feeling that he can put off thoughts of serious work. A complete outfit of clothing and bedding and $85 in cash, the equip-ment which the average released road camp prisoner takes with him, is believed to be sufficient."

That No Boy Forgo College Merely for the Lack of Funds

New Haven, Conn. Special Correspondence HOUSANDS of young men and women have, within a few days,

A great change, almost unnoticed, has come and thousands of students, in these days of efficiency and organization, have time to play on the athletic teams, indulge in the social side of college life, get exceptiosally high marks, and still find time to earn all, or a good part of the money needed to pay for the education they are securing. There is nothing mass. are securing. There is nothing magical about the process, and sentimen for the self-supporting student is no even conspicuous by its absence. It is expected that if he comes to college without funds he will work and earn enough to pay the bills. Otherwise, why did he come?

What has caused this metamor phosis—this changing of the drudge into a bright-eyed youth who does not feel that because he is forced to work while attending college, he should be given an encouraging pat on the back by his instructors? Or sighed over by the sentimental spin-ster who can remember when Sena-Jones was at college, and was employed by her father (at the rate of 50 cents a week) to keep the fur-

To some extent, the answer is simple one. The colleges and univer-sities have come to realize that the haphazard methods of other days, when the needy student came to and walked from door to door until he found work, could not be successfully employed today, when one out of every three students needs work, and the number of students in this class is almost as large, in many be; term-time and vacation employment and scholarship are apportioned in accordance with what appears to the bureau to be most advantageous to the largest number of students. Particularly the bureau tries to develop each student's earning power as the student himself develops and progresses through his course. Many a man, glad to do anything in freshman year in order to meet his expenses, is, as it were, steadily promoted to more and more important assignments until he finally reaches firm ground. Then, if he has made a satisfactory record in college the bureau helps him to secure a promising position after his course is completed. Thus, from sub-freshman days toward and after graduation there is a continuity of effort in his behalf.

The success of this effort, as in all

The success of this effort, as in all else, depends upon the individual student, we are reminded by Professor Crawford. "It must be borne in mind," he says, "that scholastic preparation adequate to meet the equirements of college courses; character and determination equal to the rigid test of earning a living and securing an education simulta neously; an ability to make the mos out of each day's opportunities, are essential to success. Instead, when he recivities in July the coveted notice that he has been admitted, he is also told that if he should find it necessary to earn any part or all of his expenses, he should apply to the bureau of appointments for aid in securing work, and, perhaps, a scholarship. Prof. Albert Beecher Crawford, director of the bureau, sums up the aims of his department in these words:

The bureau of appointments in general attempts to aid the Yale man continuously and progressively throughout his college course. First of all, it is the desire of the bureau to help the freshman get properly started and to plan with him what started and to missed. Of these almost countless thousands, approximately two-thirds will arrive on the campus with sufficient funds in pocket (or at home) to pay the cost of a year's education. There will be students who have enough money to pay for the first semester's tuition, and enough ready cash to hold them over for about two weeks. There are many entering college this month who have nothing but tuition scholarships, good health, keen minds, and lusty ambitions to become educated. Since ex-periments in so-called international discussion concerning the form these schools should take in order that they may be safeguarded against bias from any national group. The ideal which seems to be emerging is that the best of nationalism must be conserved in an atmosphere of in-ternational co-operation.

And since these items total at least one-half of the necessary $\frac{1}{100}$, the price of a college education, it can be seen, is not quite so steep as at a first glance it appears to be.

Nevertheless, the fact remains that John will need $1100 to go through the year, and this appears to be a rather formidable obstacle. Let us see just what comprises this fig

The fact that approximately three-fifths of the funds of the University Institute of Higher International Studies come from a foundation in New York and that a million dollars will be sought in the future to insure adequate development, shows the extent to which the United States is supporting such educational profects. One is pleased to discover that these did not become the dominating concepts in Chinese political thought. They were, indeed, largely overshadtrines of the school headed by Confucius (born about 550 B. C.) and Mencius (born about 450 B. C.) Confucius dreamed, like Plate, of a Utopia, "a state founded upon an idea not greatly, different from a state which recognized the command Love thy neighbor as thyself as a fundamental principle." But it was Mencius, educated by his mother, a model for Chinese women of all time, who first laid down the enlightened maxim, so fundamental for all political development, that "human nature is good, or, at least, is constituted for the practice of what is good." "The tendency of man's nature to be good," says Mencius, "is like that of water to flow downward. By striking water you may cause it to lasp up, but such movement is not according to the nature of water. It is the force applied which causes it. HEN a new decorative motif and factory, was searching through the French museums for ideas to use in dinnerware decorations, when turers of some special household furnishing, this motif must, of necessity be adopted by the manufacturers of many other household decorations. Fabric and leather manufacturers have lately been sponsoring plaids for interior decoration. wall paper designers were forced to produce plaids to form backgrounds for the modern furniture with its futuristic lines-forced by the inte-rior decorators, who used gingham and taffeta for wall coverings, when they were unable to find plaid papers.

Now, the dinnerware factories are offering plaids on their dishes. No less a one than W. T. Copeland & Sons of Stoke-on-Trent, England, have produced the ware photographed. It is an earthenware body and of the long-famous Gadroon shape, copled for a member of British royalty 150 years ago from the work of the Georgian silversmiths. It is a shape that has been produced steadily since it was originated by Josiah Spode a century and a half ago, and is still produced in the factory where Spode worked.

to the region westward save where they are pierced by one brave climbing road, that all roads to me have ever seemed to be alluring things and cross-roads among the most adventurous places in the world, Whilst, as to signposts with their silent pointing arms—in older days they were even given hands and fingers—they still tell me tales of old romance and nothing will ever deter me from believing that some day or another I shall arrive at a signpost and cross-roads, maybe in a country that I have not yet seen, and, choosing a road to follow, shall find unimaginable happiness.

I am never wholly forgetful of this fancy of mine when I drive in strange lands and come into new highroads where the tall signposts announce the distance to places far away. Bordeaux, four hundred and seventy kilometers, says the trim, tall, official sign that har replaced the weatherbeaten leaning post of twenty years ago, and I look down the long white road that plunges through Norman forests and Norman farmiands and apple orchards and see myself in bright imagination entering Bordeaux away beside the southern seanot perhaps as myself, but as the sallor boy who passes along on foot with his bundle in his hand, for whom Bordeaux is to be but the beginning of adventure; or as a traveler of renown who not only sees

In my own childhood the entrances to such lanes were nearly always provided with a signpost of weatherworn lichen-covered wood, leaning sideways very often and stretching out a specter-like arm in the direction of some hidden hamlet near by. For in premotoring days, the world was conceived of in smaller sections and it was plainly unnecessary to direct anyone farther than he or she would want to walk on a summer day.

There have, however, always been There have, however, always been brave cross-country travelers who ventured farther afield and must have been grateful for even the most delabrous leaning finger-post if it was situated in the midst of a wild solitide. Up on the uncultivated moor-lands away toward the hills, where now good automobile association signs abound, there may still some-times be seen one of these weathered signposts knotted and gnarled, loom-ing friendly out of the mist, or stretching out four warning arms across the whins and furze and heather. A century ago traveling drovers would find their way with their sheep or ponies, or black cattle, by just such rough guidance, down to the fairs and markets of the plains and back again. You may look upon the manner of their going in a scene tude. Up on the uncultivated m the manner of their going in a scene beautifully preserved for posterity by David Cox, the English water-colorist. who seems to have had a special love for finger-posts and scenes at cross

The picture I think of hangs in the Art Gallery at Birmingham, England, and presents a horseman who has arrived with his herd at the opening of a rough cart-track across a wild morass. Away in the distance a wild morass. Away in the distance are triple mountain heights of loveliest fairy blue—dear mountains of my native land; a busy wind seems to be blowing over from the sea, which cannot be far away since guils are tossing in the cloudy sky; the slow-moving cattle browse along the rutted road, and the horseman himself, who has his long stick extended pointer-wise toward the left, has obviously just been informed by a redpointer-wise toward the left, has obviously just been informed by a red-cloaked gipsy woman, met upon the way with her laden donkey and attendant boy, that he must take the road that turns to the left at the foot of the tall signpost with four drooping arms which is plainly to be seen in the mid-distance.

Driving over the hills, as I do now and then, I sometimes pass side roads marked by tall signposts bearing that still breaths of romance names that still breathe of romance and awaken quite other thoughts than those of geography. Though I have never yet been able to turn aside at one particular spot that most appeals to my fancy, I pass it always with delight. It is a corner where a road drops down into a green valley set round by limestone hills where there is much outgroup. hills where there is much outcrop-ping rock, gray and bare amongst fair woodland and emerald pasture land: a rural place full of rest and quiet Only a few remote farmhouses are visible from the high road. But a village is hidden away in the winding valley and the signpost declares that it is the village of Nant Clwyd, which everyone knows is close upon the borders of the Welsh fairyland Hu-dy-Ledryth. So that, as I drive by, I always fall to thinking of that strange youth Caradoc who lived at Nant Clwyd years ago, so the tale Nant Clwyd years ago, so the tale runs, and wandering after a lost calf over the rocky hills hard by, came, like Rip Van Winkle, by some magic upon a valley he had never seen before; was kindly entertained by its inhabitants who appear to have been a kind of faery folk and, losing all consciousness of time, returned home at last to find that he had been at least sixty years upon his errand. A curious story, but one much loved by men in past ages and common to the literatures of the world.

adaptations. It is an aspect of nature's careful provision for the future. Most of the bulbs cultivated come from dry and sunny parts of the earth. The narcissus is a native-of the Mediterranean region, Illies come from Asia Minor, tulips from Siberia, gladioli from South Africa.

In these countries summer is dry and very hot. In some of them it is followed by a long and hard winter. The season of growth is thus reduced to narrow limits. Under such conditions a plant must needs start at the earliest possible moment. The bulb is an adaptation for a particular kind of climate. The plant stores food in the bulbs so that it may start flowering early while annuals have to wait, as Grant Allen says, "till they have collected enough material in the collected enough material in the same year to flower upon." Bulbs lie in millions under the dry Karoo in South Africa and when the rainy seahurricane.

STOCK MARKET PRICES MOVE IRREGULARLY

High-Priced Specialties Are Features of the Trading

NEW YORK, Sept. 23 (A)—Stock prices opened irregularly higher at the opening of today's market.

Baldwin, which was weak yesterday, opened 2½ points higher, and Nash Motors showed an initial gain of 2%. General Motors (old), and U. S. Steel common opened urchanged at 264 and 150%, respectively.

Despite the increase of nearly $34.
500,000 in brokers' loans, prices soon headed upward in contrast to earlier sessions of the week, when late selling movements were followed by morning reactions.

Buying orders were distributed over fairly broad list, but centered largely the high grade automotive and rubber issues.

Goodyear and Goodrich rubbers quickly advanced 2 points each to new high records, and General Motors old and new, Mack Trucks and Timken Roller Bearing sold 1 to 2½ points higher before the end of the first half hour.

higher before the end of the first half hour.

Special buying also took place in such high priced specialities as du Pont and Houston Oil, but Baldwin lost its initial gain despite President Somuel Vanciain's statement of better business and increased operations.

Calumet & Arizona also reached a new peak. Bear traders continued to ferret out weak spots. Renewal of selling pressure against Willys Overland common sent that stock below $15 a share to the lowest level since 1925, and Murray Corporation broke 6 points to a new low for the year. Marine preferred was another weak spot. Foreign exchanges opened firm with demand sterling around $4.86 3-16.

Stocks Resume Advance

Apparent confidence in the liquidated condition of the market as a result of the week's sharp depreciation in the prices of many stocks induced a reaumption of vigorous bull operations on a broad scale.

Du Pont, International Harvester, Warren Brothers, Calumet & Arizona, Commercial Solvents, Greene Cananea. Copper and Foundation Company advanced 4 to 5½ points.

New York Central went up 3 points to above 168, The renewal rate for call loans was unchanged at 4 per cent.

Polish Bonds Up

Polish Bonds Up

Today's bond market presented evidences of continued brisk demand for high grade railroad and utility liens, many of which again were hovering within small fractions of their best prices of the year. Offerings appeared to tighten up, however, after yesterday's spurt, and business declined somewhat in volume.

The individual feature of the trading was furnished by Polish 8s, which went up to 100%, the highest price of the year. The new Polish loan is understood to have been completed by a New York syndicate, and public offering of some $45,000,000 of the total $70,000,00 of bonds is expected in the local market within a short time. Other foreign issues were duil. Chicago & Western 5s and Atchison general 4s sold in moderate amounts general 4s sold in moderate amounts close to their peak prices, and Detroit Edison 5s were in demand ¼ under their year's top. Industrials on the whole were inactive.

Duliness and irregularity character-ized the Federal Government group.

INVESTMENT FUNDS CONTINUE TO BE IN GREAT ABUNDANCE

Moody's Weekly Review of Finan-cial Conditions in its current issue says: Stock prices on Monday demonstrat-Stock prices on Monday demonstrated their sensitiveness to any withdrawal of funds from the call loan market; and they also demonstrated the eagerness of the buying on any slight reqession. After drastic declines of a few hours, the recovery at the close was almost complete.

There are many straws suggesting the possibility of an enthusiastic wave of indiscriminate buying.

Among the evidences of public, enthusiasm are the universal circulation of tips, the faultiplication of investment trusts, the great volume of financial advertising, the large number of

No. 40 is known as the gir line cross-state highway of Missouri. It is the shortest route between Kansas City and St. Louis, the distance between the city limits of the two centers being only 243.4 miles. It is where he has many friends. He at-tempted to get the official Gazette to print an edict appointing Comshorter than any railroad line con-necting the cities. The shortest dis-tance by rail between the union stanalistic mission, where he was received by President Coolidge and many prominent people, was also arrested but has since been given his freedom. Senhor Ferro was an intimate friend of Senhor Filomeno da Camera and was accused of making propaganda in different barracks in his favor. It was afterward proved that this accusation was unfounded, and that his visits to the garrison. The Legion post will seek permission for planting of the trees from the Missouri State Highway Commission. The commission has indi-mission. The commission has indi-cated on other occasions that it was categ on other occasions that it was favorable to such an undertaking, but has explained there were no state funds to be expended in the enterprise.

T. W. LAMONT EN ROUTE TO JAPAN TO CONSULT WITH FINANCIERS

Accompanied by Jeremiah Smith Jr. of Boston-"Big Business," Not Government's Finances, Involved, Is Report

washington—Thomas W. Lamont, of J. P. Morgan & Co., is en route to Japan, to consult with Japanese financiers on subjects connected with the economic situation in their country. Of no less significance than Mr. Lamont's own trip is the fact that he is accompanied cance than Mr. Lamont's own is the fact that he is accompanied by Jeremiah Smith Jr. of Boston, who made an international reputation in 1925 and 1926 as the re-ructor of the finances of Hungary. Mr. Smith functioned at Budapest as the commissioner of the League of Nations. A third member of the Lamont party is Martin Egan, former newspaper man and now attached to the executive staff of the Morgan the executive staff of the Morgan Banking House in New York.

The Lamont-Smith mission is causing some speculation. When he sailed for the Far East on Sept. 17, Mr. Lamont conveyed the impression that he and his friends were going to Japan merely at the invitation of financial colleagues there. He added that business has nothing to do with the trip and that he expects social activities to take up all of the party's time in Tokyo.

Persons in a position to know of made on others.

The immediate cause of the difficulties was the delay in the passage of legislation to extend the "earthquake hills." These bills were bank loans that were made uncollectible by the great earthquake in September, 1923. Through an arrangement with the Bank of Japan at that time, the Government came to the relief of the banks holding such paper by authorizing the Bank of Japan to resolve with licenses before they are empowered to sell real property.

For Others

Miami, Fla. Special Correspondence LTHOUGH the hurricane warn-Attrough the hurricane warning was sent out late in the afternoon, just before closing time, it did not come too late for the manager of one of the old hardware companies of Miami.

He immediately ordered all his truck drivers to load the largest and strongest rope in stock. Then he told them to hurry to all the boats and yachts on the Bay front and

Miami River, and deliver to everyone ample lengths and not to lose any time in discussing money or charges as they had no part in the transac

The hurricane lasted about 12 hours, beginning about midnight, and the damage to the water craft was very great, but it was quite evident that the thoughtful and big-hearted hardware manager had helped to reduce this to a minimum, and many grateful boatmen will never forge his splendid act for their protection and safety.

A FRIEND sends a clipping from the Yorkshire (Eng.) Post de-scribing an unusual feat in railroading. A passenger coach which had become uncoupled was gathering speed on its perilous runaway trip down the gradient leading to Crimple. Word concerning the emergency was fashed to Jack Easton, a young man in charge of a light shunting engine, who immediately started his engine in pursuit. Quick-wittedness and a perfect calculation of the relative speeds enabled him to climb out over the engine and lift the heavy coup an exact coupling.

A BEAUTIFUL lesson in living for others, according to a contribution from A. M. W., Silver Creek, N. Y., was furnished by a woman of 87 who lived on a small pension. Despite the advices of relatives that her walks and house foundation "would last as long as she needed them," she made extensive repairs, an act which was a legacy in unselfishness to all cover the cost of their dinners; and

TWO of four contributions from Miss F. D. of New York describe interesting bits of kindnesses to animals. One tells of a man, who conducts a large wholesale business, who makes it a practice of picking up distressed animals, feeding them and sending them to a rescue home. The other tells us of a woman in very modest circumstances who, be-fore she left on a week's vacation. left with the watchman of a certain building two cans of salmon to feed some cats which she felt might be overlooked during her absence.

Manchester, like to spend their holidays in school. The school is held in one of the ordinary municipal school buildings, but managed by the school buildings, but managed by the Manchester University Settlement. The pupils number nearly 400, and they range in age from 2-year-old babies to boys and girls of 13 and 14. The children are allowed to choose their own occupations. Besides various arts and crafts, singing and dancing are taught by a competent instructress, and interesting concerts are given. Much of the ing concerts are given. Much of the work is done in the open air, in play-cover the cost of their dinners; and the City Corporation allows them to travel to the school on the municipal tram cars at reduced fares. A fea-ture of the enterprise is the large amount of voluntary shelp which it enlists. A number of university stu-dents and older pupils from the high schools take part in the teaching and supervision from day to day.

A HAPPY COINCIDENCE London Saturday Review: It was a happy coincidence that took the Prince of Wales and Mr. Baldwin to America just after the failure at Geneva and brought about the meeting on the Peace Bridge with the Vice-President of the United States. It is a poor friendship be-States. It is a poor friendship between either nations or individuals that cannot tolerate any differences of opinion; rather is it the sign of true friendship when it can reconcile candor with partiality. Europe took a certain pleasure in the spectacle of England and the United States arguing with each other at Geneva, but our differences are not like those that divide Europe, and if neighboring states in Europe managed their relations with anything like the success of Canada and the United States there would be no problem of disarmament to solve.

Publishers Syndiente: Europe calls us dollar chasers, but those who can't borrow them must chase them.

AIDS TO GOLFING

Glasgow Herald: Not very long ago attention was drawn to the cleverness of a fox terrier belonging to a golfer who had trained the animal to hunt for and retrieve lost balls. Now it is stated that the golf course at Coombe Hill is frequented by a pigeon which follows players on their round, flies ahead when they drive, and, though a pigeon, keeps an eagle eye on the "wee gutty," and hovers obligingly over it when it comes to rest, thus sagaciously indicating its position.

Such a caddie and pointer is all very well on a well-kept course, but would surely be often at fault on some of the inferior ones. There are little courses known to all of us, where the player really requires the assistance not only of such a winged scout as this pigeon, but of a trained otter to follow his ball into water, and an enthusiastic and educated mole to dig for it when it goes to ground!

Clearing Up the Press of the World

THERE is much significance from the world viewpoint in the recent conference of the international press at Geneva, the chief object of which was not to discuss merely technical questions, important as these are, for the improvement of news services, but to focus the attention of the press on its primary duty of holding up the mirror to public affairs, whether in Geneva or elsewhere, in such a way that they shall be presented in a clear and impartial manner. This was the goal at which all the discussions aimed: how to improve the service which the press renders to the world, so that its work, to quote from the official preamble to the resolu-tions which were adopted, "may be made more effective in its great and responsible mission of accurately and conscientiously informing world public opinion and hence of contributing directly to the preservation of peace and the advancement of civilization."

Relative to the question of the censorship of the press, there were no two opinions expressed as to its evil effect, and a strong resolution was passed condemning all governmental interference with the liberty of the press save in exceptional circumstances. As was pointed out, the censorship at all times encouraged the dissemination of false rumors with all their dangerous reactions in public sentiment and international relations. But since such censorship exists even at the present time, the conference had to take cognizance of it, and it therefore demanded that certain safeguards should be taken to insure the proper handling of press messages by specialists employed for the purpose, to prevent unnecessary delays, while it recommended that the journalist should be informed in every case of excisions made in his work, and retain the right to withhold any censored message.

Among the other resolutions which were passed, with the concurrence of the American delegates, was one expressing satisfaction at the evidences of a growing desire among the world press for better international relations and the maintenance of world peace. Moreover, newspapers, and news agencies were recommended to take adequate measures against the publication or distribution of inaccurate, exaggerated and distorted news or articles so that the growth of a friendly understanding among nations might be promoted. Another resolution emphasized the value of press collaboration in combating hatred between nations and classes so that the way to moral disarmament might be pre-

Although the Secretariat of the League of Nations had not suggested that any steps should be taken to promote propaganda on behalf of the League, the conference, again with the support of the Americans, recommended that big newspapers should establish a department devoted to making the work of the League known in an objective fashion, and the League was declared to be worthy of the closest attention, as constituting one of the most interesting movements in history.

The attitude which the press should adopt on moral questions so that the public may be preserved against the contamination of unclean news was not discussed. But contentious and false news on behalf of nation or party was emphatically condemned. In fact, the whole tenor of the discussions proved that the conference fully realized the importance of maintaining a high moral standard in the press of the

Greenland's Development Near

DROBABLY it is a fact that despite the nearness of Greenland to the North American continent, less is known today about this. the largest island in the world, than was the case with what was termed "darkest Africa" not so many years ago. The reason should not be far to seek. Not only is the Danish colony located so far north in the Western world that climatic conditions erected their own barriers to a closer acquaintance with what the interior of Greenland contained, but Denmark itself has only of late awakened to the fact that there might be a possibility of a better development of the country, now that modern invention and initiative have almost made the word inacces sible obsolete.

As a first and most important step to discover to what a degree Greenland may be brought within the range of useful territories. the Government of Denmark is preparing to undertake the charting of the colony in a more comprehensive manner than has ever been the case before. Considering that Greenland has an area of some 2,182,000 kilometers, and extends over twenty-four parallels of latitude, such an enterprise assumes proportions that cannot fail to call for attention. Even then it is the purpose of only charting certain stretches of land in proximity to the coasts, especially on the west coast, from as far north as the Discos Island. As for the interior, whatever knowledge the world will gain of this ice-clad region will come in all probability for many years only from explorers.

With regard to such regions as may be utilized more fully than has been the case in bygone years, a new Danish Greenland association is preparing to further the interests of the colony and not only seek to develop Greenland, but to extend its interest to a betterment of the native Eskimo population. A main point in the program of the association is to have the government trade monopoly abolished, and in this way open up the country to general commercial exploitation. This monopoly, it is agreed was well enough when first instituted, but no longer serves its erstwhile purpose. A limited immigration will also be encouraged, so that sheep and reindeer farming may be undertaken. together with whatever other agricultural pursuits are possible in the respective latitudes. New regulations regarding fishing privileges around the coasts of Greenland may also very likely result from the present interest in the country. There has been a tendency to retain this fishing for the Greenlanders alone, but for some time there has been an agitation on foot to at least admit the Icelandic fishermen and those from the Faroe Islands as well to the waters around Greenland.

Aside from the direct commercial possibilities in prospect, as a result of this Danish undertaking, an enterprise of importance and interest under the auspices of the University of Michigan may add not a little to the existing knowledge of interior Greenland. The Danish Arctic explorer, Helge Bangsted, is in charge of an expedition which will erect in the center of the inland ice a station for meteorological and glacial researches. Bangsted's familiarity with the polar region includes his participation in the fifth Thule expedition of Knud Rasmussen.

Denmark's colonization of Greenland dates from 1721 when the Norwegian clergyman, Hans Egede, arrived on the west coast where he established the colony called Godthaab. According to the census of 1921 the population then numbered 14,355, including 274 Europeans, that is Danes. Under Danish rule it has proved possible to preserve the Eskimos as a race, while at the same time letting them have the benefit of civilization. The effect of the recent efforts to develop the country should be of general interest since it is characteristic of the time to permit minority races to obtain their full share in the great civilizing influences that are being brought to bear upon world conditions

Reciprocating Prosperity

RUSSIA and Persia have signed a reciprocity. officially a normal flow of trade and com-merce between those two countries. No less important, however, are the trade conventions which have recently been reached between other countries of Europe. Spain and Cuba have entered into an agreement, and more recently France and Germany have signed and put into effect a commerical treaty which will permit a greater freedom in the exchange of goods between those countries. Among others more or less recently signed may be noted treaties between Austria and Czechoslovakia, Albania and Austria, Bolivia and Germany, France and Hungary, and Iceland and Russia From reports received from Europe it is indi-cated that these agreements are but the fore-runners of numerous other similar conventions into which the nations are planning to enter between each other.

These agreements, it is evident, are the direct outcropping of the numerous economic discussions which have been indulged in during the past year or so. The undesirable effects of the high tariff walls erected by the European states immediately following 1918 have become so patent that they were the subject of a manifesto signed by the leading international bankers of the world. Later an international economic conference was convened at Geneva to which the United States sent delegates. The ways and means of promoting the inter-change of goods and the development of markets received no inconsiderable discussion at the Geneva meeting. Statesmen were not ready at that time to accept a recommendation for the complete removal of tariff barriers, but they have been willing enough to meet the situation by means of special reciprocity treaties or agreements. That is just what we are now witnessing.

Experience may well prove that the present is an efficacious way of meeting the issue. Through directly negotiated reciprocity agreements each nation may bargain for the best markets for its goods while giving away only such markets as measured by home requirements may seem reasonable. There results no immediate leveling of tariffs or protection with a nossible resulting industrial chaos but those barriers are sufficiently lowered to meet the immediate needs.

All the testimony brought back from Europe by trade experts of the United States indicates that there has been a notable industrial recovery throughout Europe. This improvement in business seems to have been the result of a reflection of the industrial prosperity of the United States. It is because of this economic recovery that a decided movement is possible toward the removal of unnecessary tariff barriers. If that evidence is true, then the United States has nothing to apprehend from the devolopments but everything to gain. Only through prosperity abroad can money be earned with which to purchase the exports from the United States. This country, therefore, has a decided interest in the reciprocity agreements between the European states. With most of them favored-nation treaties are existing which guarantee to the products of the United States tariff concessions equal to such concessions as may be granted to other countries. Similar treaties are in the process of negotiation with the other countries. Under such an arrangement the United States may reasonably expect to continue to share in the increasing prosperity abroad and to help bring about the removal of the European tariff barriers.

Keeping the Flag on the Seas

DVOCATES of an American merchant marine have had cause for satisfaction in the maritime developments of recent weeks. The interest manifested in the steamship situation by President Coolidge upon his return to Washington, the proposal of Edward N. Hurley, former chairman of the United States Shipping Board, that railroads be permitted to own and operate transatlantic ship lines, the reported bills to be introduced in Congress during the coming session dealing with marine matters, and the projected fast steamship line to Europe with daily sailings from Montauk Point, Long Island, as reported in the New York Herald Tribune, indicate the growing thought devoted toward the upbuilding of the merchant marine.

It is therefore at an opportune time that the largest'vessel yet built in an American yard, the California, is to be launched next week. Designed for the intercoastal trade, this palatial liner is the forerunner of three ships which the International Mercantile Marine Company contemplates placing in this service between New York and California ports.

Almost coincident with the launching of the California, another palatial ship which is flying the flag of the United States and which, prior to the launching of the more recent vessel, held the record as the largest commercial ship to be built in the United States, enters service. The Malolo (Flying Fish), built for the Matson Line's San Francisco-Honolulu service, will depart from New York shortly en route to the Pacific, there to begin its operations between California and "the Islands." Plans also are in the formative stage for a fast line of ships to ply across the Atlantic handling the mails and passengers on a four-day schedule, with airplane equipment to shorten the journey.

The interest which these several items of marine news has evoked is an encouraging sign. The present ships will soon become obsolescent. Even now the freighters are too slow to compete with the foreign lines. The attempts of various shipping men to re-establish an American merchant marine is a worthy step, deserving of general approbation.

Lobster as a Prehistoric Dish

RATIFYING indeed is it to note that lobster T stew may have been enjoyed by prehistoric man. A petrified lobster's claw, caught in a trawler's net on the bottom of Long Island Sound, is declared by a Trinity College professor to be probably several millions of years old. Lobster—the addition of a few pieces of which to an ordinary seventy-five cent fish dinner brings the price of the latter up to about two dollars and a half-can no longer be considered as an exclusively modern institution. Assurance is given that the particular lobster of which the recently found petrified claw was a part, belonged either to the early Tertiary or the Cretaceous period.

Since that time many ages have passed. From the Jurassic down through the eons have come the Triassic, Permian, Carboniferous, Devonian, Silurian and Cambrian periods and through them all the lobster evidently has persisted true to type. And so for millions of years the lobster has at least been a potential possibility as a basis for what is now known as a fish dinner de luxe. Incidentally the world will doubtless be greatly relieved to learn that there has been found tan-gible evidence of the existence of the lobster during those early days when man had a rather hard time in "keeping the wolf away from the door." To be sure prehistoric man was not bothered much with doors but the quotation, of course, is a mere figure of speech.

The Public School Protective League

SOME years ago the quip was first given pub-licity that the school is what is public, not the child, and the sentiment of this statement, together with that of the corresponding one, that the function of the public school is to educate, not to medicate, has made itself felt to a far greater extent than maybe was expected. Anyhow, the fact remains that the Public School Protective League of California has gained much ground and accomplished considerable good in its efforts to protect the public schools of its State from medical and sectatian exploitation.

It is with interest, therefore, that one reads the bulletin issued by the league at the beginning of this school year, particularly noting that some thirty or more bills touching the question of medical freedom in various aspects were defeated through its work. And it is with gratification that one learns that the league feels that it has attained success and made progress along many lines. In an editorial greeting printed on the front page a reason, perhaps, for this success may be found. This greeting reads in part:

Let's think constructive thoughts, talk right, believe right, and expect the very best for our cause, and that of the community at large. It will bring surprising returns

This, however, is more or less incidental. The main fact that must not be lost sight of is that this organization in the past years has accomplished much good in safeguarding the welfare both of the children of the State in which it is functioning, and by reflection of those in other states as well. The public educational system of America, representing as it does the very essence of democratic institutions, must be guarded from that which would attempt to encroach upon its prerogatives of freedom and regard for what its beneficiaries see as right. The channels through which the efforts may be made thus to deprive it of these prerogatives are not of themselves the most important factors to consider. What must be seen to is that those basic privileges which are the inherent birthrights of the American Nation be not in any degree trespassed upon. Freedom, in its fullest sense, is as much the right of children as it is of their elders. "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

Editorial Notes

The statement made in this column a few days ago to the effect that "the blotter simply lies around taking it all in" has caused some question as to what "it" might be. The discovery was soon made, however, that the pen had been making a number of pointed re-marks about the ink being well, and yet appearing blue. The scissors had done so much cutting up that the paper weight had sought the aid of the clips to help pin them down. The paste had about decided to stick around for a while, although the calendar was almost ready to get a month off.

The Administration plan for farm relief says that something more than merely selling, or Government aid, is needed to take care of surpluses; that, indeed, what is necessary is better management of production. This seems to be another way of putting the old saying that a thing worth doing is worth doing well; and to it might appropriately be added the other maxim that well made is half sold.

"The Harvard Flying Club has purchased a new biplane." Crimson sympathizers may be hoping that their athletes will not go up in the air during a Yale game.

A new-and delicate instrument has been invented which will measure a billionth of an inch. Isn't that fine!

Good sportsmanship is the sugar that takes the bitterness out of defeat.

The Diary of a Political Pilgrim

FROM A LONDON CORRESPONDENT

ANY indications point to the conclusion that the great nations of the world are approaching a new and important crisis in international affairs.

Its advent is heralded by the apparent lack of results of the naval conference at Geneva, by the resignation of Lord Cecil from the British Cabinet, by the refusal of M. de Jouvenel to continue to represent France at the League of Nations, and by the profest of the smaller nations against the dominance of the large in the councils of the smaller nations against the dominance of the large in the councils of naval disarmament produced no result, but the one definite success achieved since the way for the return of Germany to the comity of Europe through her entry into the League of Nations.

But of late there has once more been a recoil. The cause of disarmament, perhaps the surest test of the growth of peace, has made no progress. On the contrary, it has had a setback. Not only have the preliminary conferences on land disarmament produced no result, but the one definite success achieved since the way for the return of Germany to the comity of Europe through her entry into the League of Nations.

of that League. The issue which is at stake is whether the civilized nations are going to drift back toward that international anarchy which ended in the World War of 1914, or whether they are going to resume their joint march toward an international organization for peace and the permanent prevention of war, which was begun amid such high hopes at the Paris Peace Conference in 1919, but which has saddy lagged ever since.

Nobody can question the fact that during the war one of the ideals which kept alive the flame of self-sacrifice, at any rate among the peoples on the allied side, was the belief that they were fighting a war to end war. They felt that nothing could warrant the appalling and fratricidal slaughter of that time but the vindication of national liberty, the triumph of democracy, and the establishment of some system which would make the repetition of such a world War impossible for the future.

+ + + The outcome of this movement was the establishment of the League of Nations at Geneva and of the Court of International Justice at The Hague. The first was an attempt to prevent war by bringing the representatives of all nations together in conference at least once a year to discuss in public their common problems and by a treaty under which they undertook not to go to war until the League had had an opportunity of trying to bring about a pacific settlement. The second was an attempt to organize both the law and the court which could settle international justiciable disputes by judicial means.

But the hopes and the promise of these days were not fulfilled. On the one hand in Europe Germany was not admitted to the League and the League itself at first was treated as an instrument for perpetuating the dominance of the Allies in Europe under the Treaty of Versailles rather than as an agency of reconciliation. Soviet Russia was violently hostile to all it stood for.

On the other hand the United States rejected both the League and the International Court, as infringing its tra-ditional policy of nonentanglement in the affairs of Europe, but offered no alternative scheme of advance toward the permanent prevention of war in their place. The period of reconstruction culminated not in a new se peace in the world, but in the invasion of the Ruhr and the estrangement of the Allies among themselves.

But when Europe stood on the brink of a fresh disaster she pulled herself together. The Dawes Commission paved the way for those measures of economic reconstruction which have since borne fruit in stabilized currencies, balanced budgets, reconstruction loans, and reviving trade. The Locarno treaties banished the specter of returning

But of late there has once more been a recoil. The cause of disarmament, perhaps the surest test of the growth of peace, has made no progress. On the contrary, it has had a setback. Not only have the preliminary conferences on land disarmament produced no result, but the one definite success achieved since the war—the far-reaching measures of naval disarmament agreed upon at Washington in 1922—has been followed by a seeming reversal at Geneva and an increase, not a reduction, of naval preparation.

Moreover, international tension has increased. Since

Moreover, international tension has increased. Signor Mussolini is not exactly a peace lover. There is much feeling between France and Germany about the evacuation of the Rhineland. Soviet Russia is constantly talking about war. The cordiality between the United States and the Allies is not so apparent as it was during the war. The civilized nations certainly do not seem to be growing more friendly to or less suspicious of one another, or to be making much progress toward either disarmament or the organization of permanent peace.

The seriousness of this situation lies in this: that, nations The seriousness of this situation lies in this: that, nations being considered as units, there seems to be, under present conditions, no means of settling international disputes which will not yield to reason or mediation or good will, save war. Inside every nation the settlement of disputes by violence is forbidden and is prevented by the police because the legislatures and the law courts provide alternative and better methods of settlement.

But in the international sphere, except for the League of Nations, which does not include all the world and which has only the power of delay, there is no method once diplomacy fails, save war. That is why there has hardly been a decade during the last 1000 years which has not been disfigured by war-by the brutal killing of our

It is not that people are especially foolish or wicked in their international relations. There are plenty of bitter political struggles inside every nation, when feelings run high and bloodshed might ensue if the mechanism of the state did not exist to keep order and to settle the dispute. It is that when differences of emission and international It is that when differences of opinion and interest arise between nations, as is inevitable from time to time and as is likely to become more rather than less frequent as time and space contract under modern discovery, there is no redress where agreement fails, save war.

It is the recognition of this important fact and of the great hazards to the peace and progress of mankind which it implies—hazards that are but little appreciated by the ordinary individual-which has led to the action which men like Lord Cecil have taken in order to call attention to the situation which confronts the world.

What the way out is I should not like to try to fore-cast, though it certainly must include arrangements which will "outlaw" war between the great democracies and substitute arbitration for war in some shape or form at the

From the World's Great Capitals—Berlin

BERLIN may yet become an important port in the German-American passenger service, not a port for steamboats, however, but for flying boats. Plans are under way to convert the Mueggel Lake in the east of this city into a giant harbor for ocean-going airplanes, thus making it the terminus of a service between Berlin and New York. A dependable transatlantic air service should be carried out only by airplanes which can descend on the water, it is averred here. The regular airport of Berlin would be of little use to such hydroplanes or flying boats. The Mueggel Lake on the other hand should form an ideal seaplane harbor. Its great length of 4.5 kilometers would enable even the most heavily laden airplane to take off, while its proximity to Berlin-it can be reached in half an hour by slow train-would add to the comfort of the passengers as well as to the speed of the service.

The Berliner on the whole knows little about his drinking water except that it ranks among the best and purest of any capital. Most people living here think it is taken from the many lakes surrounding Berlin. But this is not the case. With the exception of 3 per cent, the entire water supply of Berlin is obtained from wells, some of which reach as far down into the earth as 100 meters. The consumption of water in this city in the summer reaches the colossal figure of 500,000 cubic meters daily, but the waterworks are capable of supplying even more than that, namely, 740,000 cubic meters daily so that an emergency can easily be met. Next year they will even be in a position to produce 800,000 cubic meters daily. Despite the mous quantity of water pumped to the surface by day and night, the underground water level is said to have risen by a few centimeters in the past years.

For this purpose he has made a close study of recent Hamlet investigations whereby he has come to the conclusion that the Danish prince was a leader of a revolt of republican officers against the king. Hamlet's conflict in this revolution will be the central point of his

The Funkturm of Berlin—a huge wireless mast with a spacious restaurant on the first platform fifty meters above the ground and an observation platform 128 meters high which is reached by a lift—is just celebrating the third which is reached by a lift—is just celebrating the third anniversary of its erection. During the three years of its existence 350,000 persons have visited it in order to enjoy a bird's-eye view of Berlin and its western surroundings. Most any day hundreds of persons can be seen standing in long queues awaiting their turn to go up. After dark the illuminated advertisements of the tower light up its surroundings while a powerful searchlight, rotating on its top, sweeps the skies with a white finger as a signal to airplanes. More and more the "Funkturm" has become planes. More and more the "Funkturm" has become a characteristic feature of this city. However, plans are under way already for the erection of an even larger tower which is to be 400 meters high and from which a cable railway is to stretch across the Havel Lakes to Potsdam.

Upon entering one of Berlin's large cinemas one's attention immediately is attracted by a low buzzing sound; at the same time one discovers a strange fish-shaped metal body suspended by a long rope from the ceiling, whirling around in a circle over the heads of the audience. Each time it passes our seats on the balcony—and it passes by so near that one could almost catch it with the hand—it leaves a fine aroma in its wake. It is a new air purifier which is the delight of all who visit this motion-picture theater. Shortly before the performance begins its hum-ming ceases, its circles become smaller, and slowly it is drawn up to the ceiling.

If it had not been for the never-ceasing roar of the If it had not been for the never-ceasing roar of the traffic around, the clanging of the street-car bells, the shricking of brakes and the shuffling of feet, the little group, rapidly gaining in circumference, standing on the edge of the footpath of Alt Moabit, one of Berlin's busiest streets, might have imagined itself at the seashore, for in front of it was the most beautiful sand castle thinkable. From its countless turrets little silver flags were flying, it had a moat and drawbridges and every single window was carefully modeled. Tiny houses huddled up against its massive walls as if seeking shelter. Two schoolboys had made this castle which covered a space of six square meters and they had put up a poster near by begging the passer-by rot to step on their work. And no one did, however great his hurry. On the contrary, most persons left with smiles on their faces and for once were reconciled to the con-stant tearing up of roads since it yielded the material from which such pleasing work could be produced.

America's True Feeling Toward Liquor

To THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: Just a few lines to tell you of my appreciation for the splendid way in which you have treated the prohibition movement, not only in the Feldman articles which I read with pleasure and profit, but also in your editorials. The last year or more my work has made it necessary for me to be traveling most of the time, and as prohibition is. very dear to me I have naturally done some observing along the lines bearing upon its welfare.

I find an increasing number of champions of prohibi-tion, and too that here it is an accepted fact not only with the voters but with the officials in whom enfor vested. The many forecasts concerning the Volstead Law have not in the least been fulfilled and the constant apprehension of the violators of this law, especially in eq ties where law enforcement knows no detours, is ex knowledge.
Impossibility of enforcement was at most only an utterance of opinion coming from the few, and blended well with their desire in the matter. Rum row, a vexing prob-lem at one time, has dwindled to a couple of little boats needing every invention of modern times to keep out of the path of our sea police. Similar conditions obtain on the mainland where many of the states have passed liquor laws in order to enforce the Volstead Law through their own enforcement agencies. During the last year these same laws have been m more effective, and in everyday language it can be said that the voters of the United States are bearing down on alcohol. Nothing could show more convincingly than these little Volstead laws the attitude of the people, and reaffirms their original desire, the Eighteenth Amendment.

It would be quite a revelation, it seems to me, could those at Washington still clinging to the cause of alcohol for a moment sense the true feeling of the voters of the United States toward ligner. Such the voters of the United States toward liquor. Surely, they would then see exactly the view held by the large majority of their col-leagues, that there is no desire on the part of the voters to be led or legislated into a condition of alcoholic content-ment, and no desire to be educated further in the matter of what is proper for them alcoholically.

Doubtless they would see that the voice of the people could not be heard in the columns of that wing of the press unfriendly to prohibition, but could be seen still and small in the preponderance of dry votes in Congress. They would see a nation determined to elevate to positions of public trust only those men maintaining in themselves ideals and qualities superior to the legislative desires of their constituency: men who can make laws, obey laws, and enforce the laws.

In my opinion, nothing could be more disheartening to the enforcement agencies and to the voters than a tepid attitude by official Washington toward prohibition enforcement. I am not sure whether this is the case or not; but I am sure that a few words from there coming from those whom the people love and revere, contending for a strict observance of the prohibition law, would set in operation a wave of wholesomeness throughout the country that would prove more potent than many corrective

On law enforcement, I would like to bring to your attention a few words, an excerpt from an address in Chicago during the war, by one of the greatest authorities on the Constitution the United States has ever known,

. . . It is a fundamental necessity of government shall have the power to decide great questions of pol shall have the power to decide great to act upon its decision.

In order that there shall be action following a deconce made, the decision must be accepted. Discussion the question must be deemed closed.

A democracy which cannot accept its own decisions, in accordance with its own laws, but must keep on end discussing the questions already decided, has failed if fundamental requirements of self-government.
